

ASIEN 26 (Januar 1988)

Abstract

The role of metropolization for the development process in India and China. The demographic and functional dimension - a comparative analysis

Dirk Bronger

After defining the concept of metropolization, the author discusses the demographic, functional and development-policy dimensions and the historical context of metropolization in China and India. Economic primacy of metropolitan cities in these countries.